

Dear Chairman and appointed members of the FCC-

PLEASE listen to the millions of Americans who rely everyday on either FREE or affordable and open internet to:

- communicate with loved ones
- educate themselves online
- do research to complete educations
- look for work
- gain employment
- work
- buy goods and services
- get help and comfort
- be entertained
- vote

Limiting a free and open internet to only those who can afford a faster 'lane' is furthering the divide in our great country of the 'haves and the have nots'.

Telecommunications companies do not need more money from those millions of Americans who don't have it.

Government should not limit our ability to free speech.

Please keep the internet open to ALL Americans, not just those positioned to afford it or gain from it.

Thank you,

Ilyssa Werstler
